FOR SKIN

The pop-up community at Black Rock City is a caring one, but the Nevada wilderness isn't. Dr Sebagh Sun-City SPF 30 is the sunscreen supermodels swear by (tanning queen Elle Macpherson is a big fan of the brand). The secret of its success lies in the super-fine filters: zinc and titanium mineral shields stay put even under the most colourful festival war paint. £50; drsebagh.com

IF YOU ONLY PACK 4 THINGS... for Burning Man

Olivia Falcon reveals her quick-fix essentials to take to a festival in the desert

FOR EYES

A very wise make-up artist once told me, if you're ever travelling to a desert, go heavy on the eyeliner. Why? Well, firstly, lining your lids with darker colours (Arabian-style kohl) reportedly deflects the sun's glare. Secondly, the waxes in the pencil are also said to protect eyes from dust in sandstorms.

Chanel's Stylo Yeux Waterproof in Oasis is mossy green with pretty golden flecks, and it really grips to skin. Swoop it into feline flicks or use over the whole eyelid for an all-night smoulder. Just the thing to wear when you want to look fierce cycling out into a sand storm. £19; chanel.com

FOR CHEEKS

Yves Saint Laurent's Sahariennes Bronzing Stone is a creamy powder that feels as smooth as marble and effectively mattifies the shiniest and sweatiest of cheeks and chins. It's been micro-milled with a clever machine to create a weightless feeling when applied on skin, which means it won't cake or show fine lines. If you work it in all over the face in a figure of eight, it will brighten a sleep-deprived complexion. Build up colour with bold strokes for a dramatic look. £35; yslbeauty.co.uk

FOR FACE

You've probably been up for three days now, riding on art cars and raving at sound systems. So when it comes to freshening up, turn to micellar water, a trend originating from France. It looks like a splashy toner but is far more hard-working: the micelles are attracted to grime and remove waterproof make-up, face paint and that infernal desert dust. Elemis Smart Cleanse Micellar Water is brilliant for when water is in short supply. After a one-minute pit-stop with a cotton-wool pad, you're ready to get back on the Dancesaurus bus. £24; elemis.com
